Frequently Asked Questions

Q: What happens when a BOOM token is buried?
A: BOOM tokens cannot exist in the discard or void and instead would return to the Rainbow Pool by game mechanic. If a token would be buried from a private zone, from a card such as Golden Pirate Amulet, it would stay buried as both players cannot verify that the buried card is a token. However upon being exhumed, tokens cannot exist in the graveyard and is immediately sent back to the Rainbow Pool.

Q: What does it mean to FIRE THE CANNONS?
A: If you control a location with FIRE THE CANNONS in its effect, the first BOOM token you trigger each turn will trigger FIRE THE CANNONS on that location.

Q: How does Maraquan Charger interact with the equipment Swift Maractite Darts
A: Maraquan Charger allows your Neopet to attack your opponent's Neopet immediately entering the Attack Step and subsequent Battle Phase steps. This is treated as a battle but you does not create a "Battle Phase". Cards that care about your Battle Phase like Swift Maractite Darts are not able to be activated with Maraquan Charger.

Q: Can Grand Commander play Caylis from your discard?
A: No.

Q: What do I do with the cards I look at with Pirate Scout?
A: After adding any BOOM tokens to your hand, return the remaining cards to the top of the deck in the order they were viewed.

Q: How does Garin interact with opposing BOOM tokens?
A: Garin is a mandatory effect that will have your opponent's Neopet take the next instance of effect damage your Neopet would have taken. Since the opposing BOOM token did not do successfully deal damage to an opponent's Neopet, it does not get to draw 1.

Q: When does Small Giant Squid block damage?
A: Treat the card as if it replaces when you "would take damage."

Q: When does Large Giant Squid block damage?
A: Treat the card as if it replaces when you “would take damage.”

Q: When does Giant Giant Squid block damage?
A: Treat the card as if it replaces when you “would take damage.”

Q: When does Titanic Giant Squid block damage?
A: Treat the card as if it replaces when you “would take damage.”
